ABSTRACT

This study concerned mainly on the islamic values encountered in human language production and comprehension. This part of analysis is related psycholinguistics; which is one of some linguistics branches that discussed about language processes on human brain namely in the left brain. The production of language of human being positioned in Broca's area and comprehension of language is located in Wernike's area. Both areas are located in human left brain. To get more understanding on how the process of language in human brain is not easy because it is something very abstract; could not be directly seen by naked eyes of any creatures. The process was done to the brain by activating some features of the brain such as Broca's area, Wernike's area, angular gyrus, motor cortex, so on. Based on psycholinguistics theory, ability to speak or produce meaningful sounds were innate in human. Its meant that human were genetically predisposed to learn and use language. The phenomenon were closely related to islamics values that all facts actually specifically and deliberately created by God; the Almighty Allah with certain purposes of course and that regularity was shown in the nature of thing in the earth. By having those facts mentioned, thus, the researcher really needed to know what kinds of islamic value encountered in human language production and comprehension, and the sources of islamic values itself. This research belongs to qualitative reasearch that the researcher functioned as the key instrument; meaning that the researcher of such kind of research must be able to know deeply on the topic being discussed by reading as many as relevant reading to make her easier in interpretating the meaning found in the result of research. The result of the research found that there were several kinds of islamic values could be found in human language production and comprehension namely social, religion, moral values and some others. The sources of values were also found in the primary sources namely the holy Qur'an; which was mostly taken from tafsir, to make the researcher easier got meaningful data, the second source was hadith; the sayings of our prophet Muhammad (PBUH), and some others. In fact the researcher did not utilize those sources for the reason of saving times, energy and money, she mostly took the data from the primary and some from secondary sources.
